The city will continue to own the land, which will be leased to the Riverbend Stadium Authority in order to construct and maintain a 3,500-seat stadium. The lease will initially run for 20 years and feature two successive options to renew, each being for an additional five years.

The post said construction will include a turf field, grandstand with offices and player facilities, 360-degree concourse, entertainment zones and two parking lots. The city said none of its taxpayer dollars will be used to construct, maintain or operate the stadium.
