

SPECIAL COVER

1 of 1

Preview: 27 year Army veteran lives everyday dedicated to support his fellow military

Beloit Farmer's Market adapts to COVID-19 protocols

BELOIT (WREX) — People in the Stateline are able to grab some fresh and local goodies all thanks to a farmers market.

The Downtown Beloit association is hosting its first-ever indoor winter market.

The association started the market back in November because of COVID-19 restrictions.

Every Saturday, people are able to get things like honey, eggs, meats, and cheese all in one spot.

"COVID put a damper on all of our vendors, we were only allowed to have a select few outdoors versus our normal hundred vendors that we normally have. So we just wanted to come up with a way to let them sell their products and then, more importantly, let them sell them year-round," said Downtown Beloit Association Executive Director Shauna el-Amin.

The market is Saturday from nine to noon at 557 East Grand Avenue in Beloit. The indoor market will end at the end of April.

Lauren Baker

Lauren Baker is the 13 News weekend evening anchor. She started in April of 2019 after moving from Michigan, where she was a morning producer/traffic reporter.

MORE STORIES

